Council homes in solar panels plan

Marina enters its final phase

SOLAR panels could soon appear on the roofs of thousands of council homes across Northampton.

Members of Northampton Borough Council's cabinet were due to decide this week whether or not to push ahead with plans to put the environmentally-friendly devices on the roofs of 3,000 of the town's 12,244 council houses.

Experts have said the move would lead to a reduction of 3,000 tonnes of CO2 emissions every year and lead to a reduction in fuel bills for residents.

In a report which was due to be considered by the council's cabinet as the Mercury & Citizen went to press, the authority's head of landlord services, Christine Ansell, said: "The council owned 12,244 dwellings in April 2010. None of these have been fitted with solar panels.

"A feasibility study has been carried out and this has identified that there are in the region of 3,000 properties with roofs of a suitable southern orientation to achieve maximum benefits from the scheme."

The council has worked out that council house tenants who agree to have the solar panels fitted would make savings in their annual energy bills of between £80 and £125 a year.

Because 60 per cent of council house tenants receive housing benefit and are on low incomes, the council believes the move will help reduce "fuel poverty".

It is also hoped the solar panels will generate income for the council as any excess electricity generated by the panels would be sold back to the National Grid. The cabinet will decide whether to push ahead with the panel plans this evening.

If they are approved, some panels could be fitted by March next year.

The first eight council houses in Northampton to be fitted with solar panels were unveiled in Woodside Way, Kings Heath earlier this year

THE first brick has been laid in the final phase of work on new moorings due to open in Northampton next month, as part of a multi-million pound marina development.

The Northampton Moorings, at Becket's Park, which will offer 80 moorings, six of which will be residential, are almost complete, with construction work under way on the new facilities building, marking the final phase of work before the moorings open in April.

When finished, the facilities building will be the only one located on the moorings island and will house the manager's office, a reception area, and services for boaters, including a shower and laundry facilities.

Members of the Becket's Park Partnership were on site to help lay a brick to celebrate the milestone in the £2 million scheme.

Chris Garden, director of regeneration at West Northamptonshire Development Corporation (WNDC) said: "The Becket's Park moorings are just the start of a new beginning for Northampton's waterside, as part of our plans to bring new jobs and investment to the area."

Councillor Trini Crane, Northampton Borough Council's cabinet member for environment, said: "In the last 12 months we have seen our town's waterfront transformed.

"I think we are now beginning to realise what a wonderful asset the River Nene is to local residents and the boating community."

Visiting ban as bug strikes

ALL visiting at Northampton General Hospital has been suspended after an outbreak of winter vomiting disease.

The hospital said this week it had been forced into the action after patients on four separate wards went down with the highly-infectious bug.

Sue Hardy, director of nursing, midwifery and patient services, said: "Clearly this is a decision we have not taken lightly and we very much regret any worry and inconvenience this may cause to families and friends of patients at the hospital.

"However the welfare of patients is of course our prime concern, and we have to do all we can to prevent the spread of norovirus to other wards."

The bug is currently affecting Compton, Creaton, Dryden and Holcot wards but the ban applies throughout the hospital until further notice.

Hospital bosses said the restriction would be reviewed on a daily basis, and permission to visit would be granted in special cases.

Relatives have been asked to contact the wards by telephone if they have any particular concerns about a patient.

Winter vomiting disease is so-called because of due to the seasonality of the majority of cases and typical symptoms but it is not unusual for it to occur in spring or even summer.

As well as NGH, a bout of the bug is also believed to be affecting county local nursing homes and the community in general.

Winter vomiting disease, sometimes called norovirus, is the most common cause of infectious diarrhoea and vomiting in England and Wales.

The Health Protection Agency (HPA) said the illness was generally mild, with people usually recovering fully within two to three days and there were no long-term effects. Infections could occur at any age because immunity was not long lasting.

Visitors to accident and emergency and outpatient areas at NGH were this week being asked to take special care and practise rigorous hand hygiene using soap and water.

A NEW scheme aimed at tackling match day traffic problems in the St James area of Northampton will be trialled next month, but residents remain frustrated that a nearby 1,000-space car park still remains unused.

A "multi-agency" attempt to alleviate traffic problems in the area will take place on Saturday, April 2, from about 4pm to 7pm, when the Saints play the Sale Sharks.

The trial will aim to increase flow from the Saints car park by directing traffic through specific routes and thereby encourage its use above parking in residential streets.

Chris Wearmouth, spokesman for the Saints, said: "We have been working very positively with Northamptonshire County Council, Northampton Borough Council and the police to try to provide a positive solution to deal with match day traffic.

"It is just a trial and we will see how this goes before we make any further announcements and we will be asking supporters for feedback after the trial, when we will then assess how it went and what we might do in the future.

"We will release the full details of how the trial scheme will work next week."

Graham Croucher, secretary of St James' Residents Association, said: "It is definitely a step in the right direction. On match days residents have been unable to get out of their streets or park any where near their own homes.

"There is also growing frustration that the Claret car park it still not being used, and it is disappointing it will not be part of the trial."

Claret Way car park is owned by the Homes and Communities Agency (HCA) but is currently at an advanced stage of negotiating a lease so that Northampton Borough Council can take it over.

1,000 in job hunt

The new Tesco Metro store is due to open on April 4

A NEW mini-supermarket in Northampton received more than 1,000 applications for just 80 jobs.

The former Woolworths store in Abington Street has been undergoing a transformation into a Tesco Metro store since October.

The supermarket giant said yesterday it had more than 12 applications for every vacancy it advertised.

Store manager Nicky Molloy said: "I was overwhelmed by the incredible response to our recruitment drive.

"In this time of economic uncertainty, it is great that we are able to create jobs and help people get back into work."

All the new staff are currently finishing a series of training programmes to get them ready for the store's opening on April 4.

Shops are key issue

THE OPENING salvos of the local elections were fired at the Guildhall this week, with the battle lines drawn over how Northampton should be regenerated.

During a tense meeting of the borough council, the leader of the opposition, Councillor David Palethorpe (Con, Billing) and the council's cabinet member for regeneration, Councillor Richard Church (Lib Dem, Kingsthorpe) clashed a number of times on whether the town centre should be protected from out-of-town developments or retail schemes such as those planned by Asda next to Franklin's Gardens should be encouraged.

In an attack on the Liberal Democrat leadership of the council's town-centre first policy, Councillor Palethorpe said: "A town-centre-first policy to the exclusion of everything else just turns away investment and employment. We should say 'Northampton is open for business'.

The row over town centre versus out-of-town could be a key factor row in May's council elections

"I can't see any reason why we can't have progress out-of-town as well as the town centre regeneration."

In response, Councillor Church said "We're not pursuing the town-centre-first policy to the exclusion of everything else."

"We'll support development outside the town centre if we can be satisfied it will not impact on the vitality of the town centre."

"That's national policy and it's a key priority of this council to protect jobs and attract investment to the town, and we'll continue to do that."

As the row intensified, Councillor Palethorpe added: "It should be a local choice about how we develop our town, not a diktat from Parliament and if that puts me at odds with the Government that's what we'll do. We'll support what's best for Northampton."

The row suggests long-running argument over redevelopment plans at Sixfields, Franklin's Gardens and the Grosvenor Centre are likely to be key in the build-up to the May 5 election.

A display of the latest plans for the Grosvenor Centre regeneration will be at the centre on Friday and Saturday.

Obese need special chairs

A HOSPITAL department is fundraising to buy more special chairs to seat overweight people while they wait for appointments.

The reinforced chairs costing about £200 each are needed for the waiting room of the clinic in the hospital's outpatients department to go with the two double-width bariatric couches in its examination rooms.

Equipment for obese patients does not come out of the hospital's budget as WRVS volunteers generate the money through bric-a-brac sales.

Most NHS trusts are having to buy equipment to cater for larger patients.

East Midlands Ambulance Service (EMAS) has a dedicated ambulance for each of its counties to transport obese patients.

The vehicles, cost the NHS about £90,000.

Duncan gets kids walking

OLYMPIC gold medal winning swimmer Duncan Goodhew has helped celebrate the success of a new project involving 36 schools in Northampton which aims to get every child walking a mile a week.

The initiative known as The Golden Mile encourages pupils to take part in physical exercise by walking round a track laid out at school and the number of laps completed is then recorded.

A total of 36 schools in Northampton have signed up to take part in the project and pupils from 24 of the schools were at Weston Favell Primary School this week to celebrate their achievements.

Mr Goodhew said: "There has obviously been an issue with obesity recently and we're trying to get children to engage in physical activity.

"The Golden Mile is an ideal opportunity for children to take part in something they like doing such as walking. They can do it with their friends and teachers and the amount of miles walked will be monitored as an incentive.

"I was really fortunate when I was younger that I found swimming. I think children used to be much more active when they weren't dropped off at school by car. But due to the fact modern roads are not as safe as they used to be and the increase in traffic, there isn't as much opportunity to do exercise such as walking to school."

The Golden Mile project has been devised by Premier Sport and developed in Northampton by extended services co-ordinators Sue Russell and Mel Smith, who are based at Weston Favell Primary School.

FINAL MARK DOWNS - MUST END THIS SUNDAY

Asylum denied

A MOTHER-OF-TWO who fled South Africa after a horrific violent assault has made a desperate plea to the UK Border Agency to let her stay in Northampton.

Sherrin Young, who lives in New Duston, has started a petition to get support for her asylum case to stay in the country after being refused a British passport despite the fact her grandparents were born in Northampton.

Mrs Young, moved to the UK in August 2009, 11 months after she was the victim of a violent armed robbery when four men broke into her home in Cape Town, an assault witnessed by her two children, Alex, eight and Grace, six.

Mrs Young was sexually assaulted and forced to hand over cash and jewellery at gun point during the robbery in September 2008. Two of the men were caught by police and one was shot dead. However, the fourth man, who Mrs Young said she was most scared of, was never arrested.

Mrs Young made the decision to leave the country soon after the terrible ordeal to be with family, including her mother and two uncles, who all have British passports and live in Northampton, but was delayed while her ex-husband gave consent to allow their children to come to the UK.

She arrived on a visitor's visa, before friends and family managed to raise £565 to pay for an application for an ancestral visa.

However, this application was rejected on the grounds that the documents had to be applied for outside of the UK.

Mrs Young was then advised to claim asylum, due to the nature of the attack, but that was also refused for a variety of reasons, including the fact she didn't make the claim as soon as she arrived.

The UK Border Agency has said that Mrs Young and her two children will be collected on Wednesday and taken to "dispersal accommodation" in Leicester and the family is only allowed to take two bags of luggage with them.

Mrs Young, aged 34, said she felt like she was being "treated as a criminal" and felt she had no choice but to make her traumatic story public.

She said: "All because I didn't apply for an ancestral visa when I was in South Africa they have put me through all this. It's like they're trying to make an example of me."

"I think I've been through enough and I've done nothing wrong. They are trying to make things as uncomfortable and traumatic as they can. But I'm strong and I've survived an attack by four men so I'm not going to give up the fight."

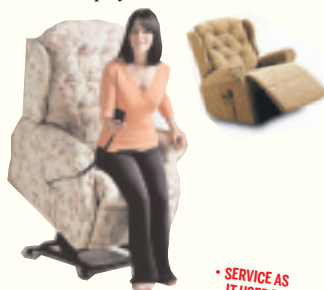

"I don't want sympathy, I just want my ancestral rights. I came here for the support of my family. I don't want to uproot my kids again. I'm feel like I'm being penalised by bureaucracy."

A UK Border Agency spokesman said: "Mrs Young's case has been carefully considered. Following a detailed assessment of the evidence, she was found not to have a right to remain here."

MEDICAL special- ists found that Louise Webster would have died whether the two PCs had attended or not, but the Independent Police Complaints Commission said the officers' behaviour had put others in danger.

GPS tracking devices on the officers' handsets proved both Pc Frater and Pc Prosser were in the village of Roade at the time of the emergency call at 12.11am on January 18 last year.

But despite their proximity to 40-year-old Louise Webster's home in Abbots Way, they refused to attend, claiming they were busy on another operation.

A third officer stationed in Towcester eventually arrived at the scene and detained killer Martin Ashby, 18 minutes after the initial call.

Ashby was last week jailed for murder and will serve a minimum jail term of 15 years.

Shamed duo keep jobs

THE disciplinary panel hearing the case of two Northamptonshire Police officers who refused to attend a 999 call where a mum-of-three lay bleeding to death, had the option of sacking the pair, but opted instead to hand them each a final written warning.

Pc Ron Frater and Pc Chris Prosser were subjected to a gross misconduct hearing before a panel comprising senior officers and an independent member of the Police Authority and the ultimate sanction available was for the pair to lose their jobs.

But despite the gravity of the accusations, which saw them refuse to attend a murder scene when they were stationed just moments away, they were let off with a written warning, to the anger of the family of Louise Webster who lost her life in the knife attack in her Roade home last year.

Det Supt Insp Pete Windridge, head of professional standards at Northamptonshire Police, said: "This hurts all of us. We cannot possibly condone their actions, in fact we absolutely condemn them. Their behaviour that night falls way outside our expected standards of performance."

The scene where Louise Webster was murdered in Roade

"They got it very, very wrong. Police officers are capable of making mistakes too but this goes beyond that, they should have gone to that incident."

The disciplinary panel heard accounts from both officers before making their judgement.

It remains unclear exactly why they were in Roade when they were supposed to be working on an undercover anti-prostitution sting in the centre of Northampton at the time.

They claimed they were following a suspicious vehicle but in the eight-mile journey from Northampton to Roade they were unable to take down any registration details of the car they were following.

Operation Uncanny also focused mainly on a number of industrial estates and retail parks in Northampton where known prostitutes would take their clients.

It is said to be highly unusual for a car to be followed to Roade, where Pc Frater had admitted viewing a house while on duty the previous evening.

DSI Windridge added: "The panel would have had reservations."

"What they were doing in Roade is questionable due to the parameters of Operation Uncanny."

Protesters against cuts marching from Becket's Park to All Saints Church

Picture by Sharon Lucy

Protest march on cuts

PROTESTERS who took part in a march through the centre of Northampton to demonstrate their anger at the public sector cuts have vowed to do everything they can to make their voices heard.

The march, which started at Becket's Park and then went along Cheyne Walk, York Road and Abington Street, was organised by an alliance of 40 different trade union and campaign groups on Saturday.

The group of more than 100 protesters filled the square outside All Saints' Church for a rally which was addressed by a number of speakers including Roger McKenzie, assistant general secretary of Unison, Cheryl Pidgeon, TUC Midlands regional secretary and David Ward, deputy general secretary of the Communications Workers Union.

Matt Wrack, general secretary of the Fire Brigades Union, Anjona Roy of the Hope Not Hate Campaign and a representative from the Education Activist Network also spoke to the crowd.

Ron Mendel, president of Northampton Alliance to Defend Services, said he was pleased with the turnout which reflected the "broad range of people" against the removal of funding from public sector services.

MP lobbies for station money

Artist's impression of how the new Northampton Station might look

NORTHAMPTON South MP Brian Binley has met the transport secretary to lobby the Government over funding for new plans for Northampton's railway station.

Mr Binley, who is also chairman of Northampton Rail Users' Group, met Philip Hammond last week to try to pressurise the Government into providing funding for the plans for the redeveloped station, which were first revealed in 2004.

The West Northamptonshire Development Corporation (WNDC) unveiled new images showing what the redeveloped station could look like at the beginning of February.

So far the group has spent more than £1 million on the plans, which it says are at the forefront of railway design, but has not yet secured enough money to finish the project.

Mr Binley said: "The last Government set targets to build another 100,000 homes around Northampton so we must improve the town's rail service and the quality of the station is a big part of that."

"Many of those people moving to Northampton will want to commute to London so we have got to improve that rail station."

"Improving the station could have a real impact on improving the quality of our town."

"I do think the secretary of state was sympathetic to our points."

Also attending the meeting was John Markham from WNDC, John Ellerby, head bus and rail development officer from Northamptonshire County Council, and Patrick Rawlinson and Geoff Steel, from the Northampton Rail Users' Group.

Mr Steel, who has worked in the rail industry for 30 years, said: "At the moment the train station doesn't even feel like it is part of the town centre."

"We need a more improved co-ordinated transport system which links it with the town."

"Our main thrust was to financially get the station to the next phase of design, as at the moment there isn't specific money to take it much further and not enough money to complete it."

"I think they need about £20 million initially."

"We also need to get more stock for the London Midlands trains to try and ease overcrowding and want to increase the speed of trains between Northampton and Rugby."

The plans feature a number of new shops and cafes next to the station.

Classic tunes for classic cars event

A STAR-STUDDERED line-up including Suzi Quatro, 10cc and Wishbone Ash will be topping the bill at this summer's Silverstone Classic.

As well as being firmly established as the world's biggest classic motor racing festival, the Silverstone Classic is equally renowned for its live music entertainment.

On the Friday evening, Silverstone will rock to the celebrated sounds of the Rolling Stones, Bob Marley and Queen as three of the UK's most acclaimed tribute bands roll back the years with sets featuring many of the best-loved smash hits from the 1960s, 1970s and 1980s.

Then, on Saturday evening, the Silverstone stage will host performances from Suzi Quatro (pictured with a Jaguar E-Type), 10cc and veteran rockers Wishbone Ash. Quatro had a string of hits in the 1970s and is widely credited as being a major role model for a host of raunchy female rockers.

Wishbone Ash is hailed as one of the major innovators in the harmony twin-lead guitar format and enjoyed huge critical success with albums such as Argus in the early 1970s.

Art rock band 10cc also enjoyed major success in the same decade, racking up no fewer than three number 1 hits.

Sunday's musical entertainment switches from stadium rock to the rather more relaxing atmosphere of the 40-piece Amadeus Orchestra, playing many crowd-pleasing classical favourites.

The Silverstone Classic this year runs from July 22 to July 24.

To buy early-bird tickets, call 0871 231 0849 or visit website www.SilverstoneClassic.com

Tickets cost £30 for the Friday night, £40 for Saturday and £40 for Sunday. Two-day weekend tickets cost £70 and three-day tickets are £80.

Acting legend in King Lear

LEGENDARY Shakespearean actor Derek Jacobi comes to the region this week as part of an eight-week tour of King Lear.

The play was a huge success at the Donmar and explores what happens when Lear's world descends into chaos and all he once believed is brought into question, with universal themes surrounding the very nature of human existence.

Derek Jacobi is recognised as one of the world's finest Shakespearean actors, while he has also appeared on television and in films.

He will be joined by Pippa Bennett-Warner as Cordelia, Ron Cook as the Fool and Michael Hadley.

The show, at Milton Keynes Theatre, is directed by Michael Grandage, the artistic director at the Donmar, whose award-winning productions include Othello, Red Guys and Dolls and Caligula. It takes place until Saturday.

Tickets are available from the box office on 0844 871 7652 or online at www.ambassador-tickets.com/miltonkeynes.

The last stand

ANOTHER year, another attempted alien invasion of Earth. Considering the shambolic state of the planet, depleted of natural resources and poisoned by man-made toxins, surely there are more attractive colonisation options in the galaxy?

Yet the extra-terrestrials continue to descend on our major cities in Battle: Los Angeles and the only way to survive is to fight back.

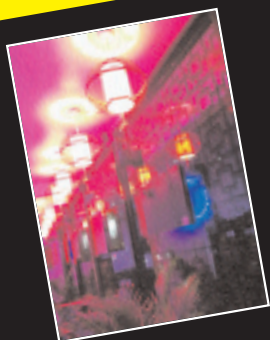

Director Jonathan Liebesman embraces the cliches of the genre with fervour, working from Chris Bertolini's script, which is crudely bolted together with explosive action set pieces and slick digital effects that create a compelling vision of a city fighting for its life.

The film is set in August 2011 with capital cities around the world under attack from a mobilised otherworldly force. Marine Staff Sergeant Michael Nantz (Aaron Eckhart), whose previous mission ended in carnage, is drafted to spearhead Second Battalion, Fifth Marines based at Camp Pendleton under Second Lieutenant William Martinez (Ramon Rodriguez) – a rising star, but who has no active combat experience. Battle: Los Angeles delivers all of the macho posturing and edge-of-seat thrills that you expect, and set to a bombastic orchestral score.

Can Audi's huge hatchback mix it with the executive car elite?

BIG, luxurious cars never used to have hatchbacked rear ends. The lifting tailgate was seen as the preserve of the utilitarian vehicles that ply our supermarket car parks and swarm around the school gates. Then the rise of the luxury 4x4 brought an interesting fact to the attention of car buyers with a desire for prestigious, lavishly appointed cars and the means to afford them. The hatchback is actually jolly useful. The leading premium car brands all offer 4x4 vehicles with hatchbacked rears and the trend is spreading, notably to four-door coupes like the Audi A7 Sportback we look at here.

The A7 Sportback was announced as the 35th member of Audi's UK model line up but don't bother trying to count them all. At the current rate, by the time you've finished, this prolific German marque will probably have launched a couple of others. Audi has risen from a position of relative obscurity to challenge arch rivals BMW and Mercedes-Benz on equal terms but staying in touch means shadowing their every move.

Mercedes was first out of the blocks in the executive four-door coupe sector with its CLS saloon but BMW followed suit with the somewhat less elegant 5 Series GT hatchback. It meant that Audi was left bringing up the rear with its A7 Sportback hatch, despite having got there first in the smaller compact executive sector with its A5 Sportback. Still, none of that matters much now that the major protagonists are in the ring, ready to slug it out and see who's best.

Familiar engines constitute the A7 Sportback line-up. It's basically the larger six-cylinder units from the A6 saloon. Petrol customers can have the 2.8-litre FSI engine with 201bhp or go for the fiery 3.0-litre TFSI that has a supercharger helping it to 296bhp and a 440Nm torque output that wouldn't disgrace a top-line diesel. The basic 3.0 TDI diesel actually has 201bhp and 400Nm in its locker but there's also an upgraded version of this engine with 242bhp and 500Nm of twisting force.

As usual in Audi land, the entry-level cars are front-wheel-drive but there's quattro all-wheel-drive for those willing to pay for it. The quattro system is Audi's latest with torque distributed 40:60 in favour of the rear wheels for a sportier experience at the wheel. The crown gear differential that debuted in the RS 5 performance model also features, with the ability to distribute more drive to the front or back of the car as required. While the front-driven A7s get the smooth Multitronic CVT automatic gearbox, the more dynamic quattro cars have the lightening fast S Tronic transmissions with seven speeds, two clutches and paddle shifters.

All A7 models feature Audi Drive Select adaptive dynamics. This allows owners the choice of driving modes which instantly alter the steering weight, throttle response and gearbox settings at the touch of a button.

Of all the design features present on modern cars, the hatchback isn't seen as one of the more prestigious. It is practical though and as premium manufacturers embrace it more readily, the old shopping hatch stigma is on the wane. The Audi A7 Sportback is an executive hatchback, a category of car that would have seemed more than a little odd a decade or two ago but on aesthetic and versatility grounds, this sleek four-door seems to have clear advantages over more conventional saloons.

In Memoriam

BLACKWELL

Violet

Treasured memories of a dear Mum and Nan.
Passed away on 16th March 1986.

The years can never take away, the love you gave us day by day.
Memories are keepsakes, beautiful and true
Of happy hours we spent with you.
You shared our troubles, laughter and tears,
Thank you Mum for those precious years.

You never asked for much in life, of riches you had few,
But you gave wealth beyond compare to those
You loved and knew.
You were so very special, what more is there to say
Except to wish with all our hearts
That you were here today.

From your loving Children and Grandchildren.

In Memoriam

CHAD WILKES

In memory of our beloved Son, Brother and Grandson.
Born 15th March 1974
Died 15th March 2006.
xxx
Too soon thy soul to infinity did fly,
On to endless days and nights,
Now untouched by Earth's turmoil,
Naught but peace prevails,
And that love we shared never be dimmed for all eternity.

A REAL STRUGGLE - Dylan Hartley is tackled during England's 22-16 Six Nations win over Scotland at Twickenham last Sunday. Hartley and his England team-mates travel to Dublin this week knowing a win against Ireland on Saturday afternoon will see them win their first Grand Slam for eight years.

Mallinder's confident following Leeds boost

JIM MALLINDER says Saints can now look forward to the Premiership run-in after getting their title challenge back on track.

The director of rugby admitted it was vital Saints got back to winning ways before their internationals returned to the club.

After losing four in a row Saints finally got their first Premiership win of 2011 at Headingley, beating Leeds 23-13.

It was the final game before England stars Dylan Hartley, Chris Ashton, Ben Foden and Tom Wood return to Franklin's Gardens with the Six Nations finishing this weekend.

The rest of the Saints players have been given a week off as there is no game this weekend, and Mallinder admitted beating Leeds was vital to send them on their holidays in high spirits.

Mallinder said: "With all the internationals coming back and the next two games at home we can look forward to the rest of the season.

"It was very important to win before the internationals came back. We talked about that ahead of the game. We have lost a couple of games with the internationals, so it was not all about them being here or not being here, but we wanted to get back to winning ways.

"The win at Leeds takes us back into the top four. We can regroup now and then the internationals will be back and we can look forward to that run-in.

"The players have all the week off. We don't want to see them again until next Monday. They have worked hard, trained hard and deserve a little time off.

"They have not had a proper week off since June, so they deserve a break."

When they come back Saints have two home games against Wasps and Sale, two teams struggling in the bottom half of the table.

It will be a chance to consolidate their position in the top four.

Mallinder will also be hoping his England quartet return to the club as Grand Slam winners.

Hartley, Foden, Ashton and Wood are all expected to be named in the starting line-up for Saturday's showdown against Ireland in Dublin (ko 5pm).

An England win will see them claim their first Six Nations clean sweep of victories since 2003, with the chance being set up by the edgy 22-16 win over Scotland at Twickenham last weekend.

Davis to return for trip to City

LIAM DAVIS will return to the Cobblers squad for the trip to Bradford City on Saturday after coming through a reserve-team friendly unscathed on Tuesday.

Manager Gary Johnson ran the rule over a handful of first-teamers in a behind-closed-doors game at Queens Park Rangers' training ground and also gave a run-out to an unnamed triallist.

Joining Davis in the line-up for the 2-1 defeat were senior players such as Nathaniel Wedderburn, Kevin Thornton and Francis Laurent, while youngsters Michael Built and Malachi Farquharson also played, with the latter scoring Town's goal.

"It was a good chance for me to have a look at a few of the lads that I haven't really seen in a match situation so far," he said.

"I got to have a good look at Liam Davis and he showed me that he wanted to be involved.

"It was good to see someone of his ability make himself available and he'll be in the squad to play at Bradford on Saturday. He's not match fit at the moment because he's been out for a little while but it's good to have him back in the fold."

As well as examining several outfield players in a 90-minute match for the first time, Johnson also cast his eye over on-loan Peterborough goalkeeper Steve Collis, who impressed him and Sixfields goalkeeping coach Tim Flowers.

"It was important for Tim Flowers to have a look at Steve Collis as well, and he was happy with how he did so that was another plus," he said.

The Cobblers slumped to their fourth straight defeat last Saturday when they went down 1-0 at home to Macclesfield, and they are now 19th in npower League Two, and just six points above the relegation zone.
